What Can Culture Do? A survey by the European Cultural Foundation

CREATIVESUNITE

Co-funded by the European Union

The European Cultural Foundation (ECF) is surveying to better understand the challenges and opportunities facing the cultural sector in Europe.

As part of their efforts to engage with their community and inform their strategic direction, they are inviting individuals to share their insights on the local context, emerging challenges, and the role of culture in addressing these issues.

The survey, titled "ECF's Survey: What Can Culture Do?", is a short, 5-minute questionnaire that aims to gather valuable feedback from the ECF's community. Participants who complete the survey will be eligible to receive a package of publications, reading and writing materials, including a free copy of the upcoming 2023 edition of the ECF's summer magazine, Common Ground.

The ECF is particularly interested in understanding the perspectives of cultural citizens across Europe. They want to know what is happening in local contexts, what challenges lie ahead, and how culture can play a role in addressing these challenges. Additionally, the survey seeks to gather input on what the ECF can do to support the cultural sector and what can be achieved through collaborative efforts.

The survey is available online at the following link. The ECF encourages all interested individuals to participate and share their insights. The survey will be open until Sunday, May 5th, at 5 pm CET, and the lucky winners will be contacted on May 13th to claim their prizes.
