About ACMC:

The Arts and Cultural Management Conference focuses on the intersection of arts, culture, and management, exploring how these elements interact and influence each other. The conference brings together scholars, artists, students, and practitioners to discuss and examine various aspects of arts and cultural management, including innovative practices, policies, and the impact of transgression and collaboration within the field.

ACMC 2024 Theme for proposals:

This year's conference is titled "Art and Culture between Transgression and Collaboration." This theme explores the dynamic relationship between transgression—pushing boundaries, challenging norms, and disrupting conventions—and collaboration—working together to create something greater within artistic and cultural practices. The conference will delve into how these two forces shape artistic innovation, cultural expression, and societal development across various disciplines such as visual and performing arts, literature, music, and digital media.

Through their submissions, applicants are invited to delve into how transgression and collaboration shape artistic and cultural expressions across disciplines like visual arts, literature, music, and digital media. This three-day event will include presentations, discussions, and networking opportunities, fostering a deeper understanding of these dynamic forces.

Application Details:

Submit your proposals through the ACMC online application portal by the deadline. Registration fees apply depending on your status (student, artist, scholar, etc.). The registration fee covers conference materials, refreshments, and consideration for publication in a post-conference volume.
