

All CCS and Cross-sectoral Research / Surveys All Europe Countries

Creative FLIP's survey on Cross-sectoral policies to further democracy in and with culture

Creative FLIP's new survey "Civic spaces matter!", aims to explore good policy practices and initiatives.

Civic spaces are important for democracy. Art and culture can provide such safe spaces for interaction in physical, as well as hybrid and digital environments. However, related full potential is not yet addressed. Improvements require cross-sectoral policies including cultural policy.

Creative FLIP, in the framework of the EU strategic project, works on collaborative transformation policies. In this context, good policy practices in a wide range of cross-sectoral areas are collected. Policies are defined as: political initiatives, strategies, action plans, funding and other support programmes, regulations and similar policy actions. With this online survey, the goal is to establish a list of good policies to be further analysed. The final outcome of Creative FLIP's research is recommendations for (EU) policy makers.

The survey comprises two questions: the first one is related to general observations from your side in view of activities in cross-sectoral policy-making. In the second one, the goal is to collect good practice policies.

Survey: Civic spaces matter!

Cross-sectoral policies to further democracy in and with culture

Complete the survey

Have you observed policy initiatives that support development of cultural places that encourage civic engagement or work on enhancing representation & diversity of cultural organizations?

Read more and join the survey here or scan the QR code above.

Main image credits: Biljana Jovanovic from Pixabay