ENCC will discuss sustainability transitions for non-urban areas

What could a sustainable future for non-urban areas look like? How can we ensure the transition is just and inclusive and what roles can socio-culture play in catalysing it?

ENCC announced that on April 17th, 2024 will be part of the New European Bauhaus Festival, with a satellite event dedicated to exploring the role of socio-culture as a catalyser of just transitions towards sustainability in non-urban areas. The event is organised in collaboration with the Horizon Europe project IN SITU: Place-based innovation of cultural and creative industries in non-urban areas.

Join this interactive virtual forum to discuss, exchange ideas and discover good practices from across Europe, with contributions from experts and practitioners in non-urban culture. Researchers from the IN SITU labs will share their experience, and ENCC will introduce the preliminary results of our qualitative research on the roles of socio-cultural centres in just sustainability transitions.

NB: the event will be held online and recorded. The recording will be made publicly accessible on our PeerTube channel as well as on the IN SITU YouTube channel. Participation is free but registration is needed.

The New European Bauhaus is an EU initiative that bridges between the worlds of science and technology, art and culture to promote more inclusive and sustainable societies.
