This annual gathering provides an opportunity for cultural policymakers, city officials, and funding bodies to engage with artists and understand the needs and challenges in the field of contemporary dance. The event promotes the importance of robust support systems for dance research, strategic frameworks for emerging artists, and policy for sustainable regional and international collaborations.

Building a Stable Platform for Dance Theory and Research

Advocating for a dedicated institute to archive and support dance research, offering a repository for scholars and a protected space for creative processes.

Strategic Framework for Emerging Artists

Addressing the need for structures that support new artists amid changing production and funding models in the international landscape.

Long-Term Policy for Regional and International Collaborations

Promoting institutional support for sustainable international connections to elevate professional standards for producers and curators in the field.
