SEEDS | Open Call Residencies for Emerging Artists

CREATIVESUNITE

Co-funded by the European Union

SEEDS aims to gather artists around Europe and take part in art residencies, share knowledge and acquire new skills in order to create artistic materials and tools developed through sustainable practices.

SEEDS aims to support young and emerging artists, raise awareness on environmental and climate-change challenges and empower them to adopt greener practices whilst promoting active citizenship through active learning.

This project will empower 12 participants, from EU sending partners, ensuring diversity, and multiculturalism.

The artistic residencies will include several different workshops and mentorship sessions with mentors and facilitators that will share how to practice sustainable art with techniques that may be used in drawing, painting, printing and sculpture, using materials that are environmentally friendly and do not create waste. These workshops will be followed by periods of free production where artists will experiment to develop their artworks using the skills they have acquired. During the project, the artists will have the opportunity to share their work and artist progress in exhibitions and presentations. In order to create awareness about project thematics participants will actively engage with targeted communities – this way better dissemination of project outputs and higher communication reach will be insured.

This includes the production of different digital output formats, exhibitions and publications.

Deadline: 30 June 2023
