Share Your Example: School & Culture Collaborations for Citizenship Education

The European Commission invites schools, educators, artists, and cultural organisations to share good practice examples of school and culture collaborations that foster democratic participation and citizenship education. If you've worked on a project that creatively supported pupils' civic engagement through cultural or artistic activities, you can now contribute to future EU policy and guidance.

Deadline for submissions: 31 October 2025

Organisers: European Commission

Who It's For: Schools, educators, artists, cultural organisations, and related practitioners

What Is This About?

This open call is part of the EU's "Culture and Democracy Study and Peer Learning" project, exploring how schools and cultural actors can collaborate to promote civic engagement, democratic attitudes, and critical citizenship education among young people.

Contributions will support the development of a Compendium of Good Practice Examples, to be published by the European Commission and shared with policymakers and practitioners across Europe and globally.

What is the EU Commission looking for?

Inspirational case studies of school-culture collaborations that:

- Were implemented in primary (age 10+) or secondary schools (ISCED 1–3), including general and vocational education
- Took place in formal, non-formal or informal learning settings
- Used participatory cultural/artistic activities to support pupils' engagement in civic and democratic life
- You can submit more than one example by completing the survey multiple times.

How to Submit

Submit your practice via the online form here: EU Survey Form
For more information, please read the detailed survey document here.

Form open until: 31 October 2025
